

Pack 02

Kids & co-parenting.

Two homes, one set of kids. Four tools to make handovers, messages and the week run smoother.

In this pack

- | | | |
|----|------------------------|---------|
| 04 | Handover checklist | 2 pages |
| 05 | Conversation scripts | 3 pages |
| 06 | Kids' routine & rhythm | 1 page |
| 07 | Kids' info sheet | 1 page |

Weekly reset → Tool 13, in Pack 04.

Where it lives in the app

Week holds your fortnight and the before and after handover lists.

Scripts has the full message library, grouped by situation.

Records keeps the dated log and shared costs.

Run the list. Pack the bag.

Some handover stress is emotional. A lot of it is a forgotten hat. This fixes the hat.
Laminate it, or slip it in a plastic sleeve and use a whiteboard marker.

In the app: Week → your handover lists tick off on Today in the 2 days before a handover.

Anything else worth knowing

“The goal is not perfect handovers.
The goal is reducing avoidable stress.”

Atlas field note

Safety first

These are for ordinary friction. If you feel unsafe, or there are threats or violence, you don't have to negotiate. Call 1800RESPECT on 1800 737 732, or 000 if you're in danger now.

Borrow the tone. Buy the time.

You don't need to sound perfect. You need to sound steady. Fill the [blanks] with specifics: vague messages get vague replies.

01 Schedule changes

Buying time

"Thanks for the message. Let me check the week and I'll come back to you by [time] tonight."

Conditional yes

"That change should be workable. I'll confirm by [time] once I've checked [school/transport]."

Soft no

"I can't do that switch this week. Would [day] work instead?"

02 Difficult messages

Pause the loop

"I'm going to stop here for tonight. I'll reply about [the pickup] by [time] tomorrow."

Acknowledge, redirect

"I can see this matters to you. On the practical part: [one line]."

Take a beat

"I've got this. I'll reply properly by [time]."

Before you send

The BIFF method, Bill Eddy

☐ Brief A few lines, one topic	☐ Informative Facts, not opinions	☐ Friendly A neutral opening line	☐ Firm A clear ask or answer
☐ Would you be comfortable with a mediator reading this later?

Keep numbers visible. Keep kids central.

The two conversations that escalate fastest. Money goes calmer when you're both looking at the same numbers. Parenting decisions go calmer when the kids are the subject, not the argument.

03 Money conversations

Slow it down

"I'd prefer to look at the actual numbers before agreeing to [the change]."

Shared picture

"Let's write down the shared expenses for [month] so we're discussing the same information."

In the app: Records, shared costs →

No quick yes

"I'm not comfortable making a quick financial decision today. Send me the details and I'll reply by [day]."

04 Kids & parenting

Centre the children

"I think consistency will help [name] most right now."

Re-frame

"Can we focus on what creates the least disruption for the kids [this week]?"

Protect the audience

"Let's talk about this when the kids aren't around. Does [time] work?"

Talking to the kids

Read more: get-atlas.com.au/how-to-tell-the-kids →

Say

"This is a grown-up decision. It isn't because of anything you did."

Say

"Here's what happens this week: [who, where, when]."

Don't

Ask them to carry messages or money between homes.

Don't

Share adult details or blame, even when they ask.

A boundary is just a repeated sentence.

You don't need a speech. You need one line you can use again next time, and the time after that. Steady beats clever.

05 Boundaries

Reusable

Logistics only

"I'm keeping our messages to the kids and logistics."

Keep it practical

"I'd prefer we keep this to [the practical issue]."

Not tonight

"I'm not available to continue this tonight. I'll reply by [time] tomorrow."

Which conversation keeps going badly? What's the one line you'll use next time?

Your line, in your words

"Borrow the tone. Borrow the line. Use it again."

Predictability helps them feel safer.

Two homes. One rhythm where you can. Bedtimes can differ between houses and kids cope. What they need is your house to be the same each time.

Kids don't need the same house twice.
They need the same you, each time.

Two homes will run differently. That's fine. What helps is predictability in yours: the same bedtime, the same bag, the same way of saying goodbye.
